Not sure at this point what would be the best, now or after the holidays. Looking more to January date. Larry will get with Bill Habedank to schedule and announcement will be made on that time/location and date.

Syrian Information: Larry suggested that a gathering of people who have differing points of view gather and acknowledge that we do make change and for not only that to be celebrated, but to come to terms on the various differences of opinions. We can not get any change to happen when there is bickering amongst ourselves. Larry will coordinate this for sometime in January. The hope is to get folks from WAMM, Anti-War Committee, VFP, Andy Berman and Terry Burke, Steve McKeown etc. It is vitally important that our groups work towards a cohesive movement and get through all the disagreements. ## Mother's Day ~ http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Mother%27s\_Day

“The United States celebrates Mother's Day on the second Sunday in May. In 1872 Julia Ward Howe called for women to join in support of disarmament and asked for 2 June 1872, to be established as a "Mother's Day for Peace".<sup>[6]</sup> Her 1870 "Appeal to womanhood throughout the world" is sometimes referred to as Mother's Day Proclamation. But Howe's day was not for honoring mothers but for organizing pacifist mothers against war. In the 1880s and 1890s there were several further attempts to establish an American "Mother's Day", but these did not succeed beyond the local level.<sup>[6]</sup> The current holiday was created by Anna Jarvis in Grafton, West Virginia in 1908 as a day to honor one's mother.<sup>[9]</sup> Jarvis wanted to accomplish her mother's dream of making a celebration for all mothers, although the idea did not take off until she enlisted the services of wealthy Philadelphia merchant John Wanamaker, who celebrated it on 8 May 1910 in Bethany Temple Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, PA of which he was the founder. In a letter to the pastor, she said it was, "our first Mother's Day".<sup>[99]</sup> Jarvis kept promoting the holiday until President Woodrow Wilson made the day an official national holiday in 1914.<sup>[6]</sup> The holiday eventually became so highly commercialized that many, including its founder, Anna Jarvis, considered it a "Hallmark holiday," i.e. one with an overwhelming commercial purpose. Jarvis eventually ended up opposing the holiday she had helped to create.<sup>[9][67]</sup> This economic modernization was inspired by US models and was sponsored by the state. She died in 1948, regretting what had become of her holiday.<sup>[99]</sup> In the United States, Mother's Day remains one of the biggest days for sales of flowers, greeting cards, and the like; Mother's Day is also the biggest holiday for long-distance telephone calls.<sup>[100]</sup> Moreover, churchgoing is also popular on Mother's Day, yielding the highest church attendance after Christmas Eve and Easter.<sup>[101]</sup> Many worshipers celebrate the day with carnations, colored if the mother is living and white if she is dead.<sup>[101]</sup>

Commercialization<sup>[edit]</sup>

“Nine years after the first official United States Mother's Day, commercialization of the holiday became so rampant that Anna Jarvis herself became a major opponent of what the holiday had become and spent all her inheritance and the rest of her life fighting what she saw as an abuse of the celebration.<sup>[9]</sup>

“Later commercialization and other exploitations of Mother's Day infuriated Jarvis and she made her criticisms explicitly known the rest of her life.<sup>[9][102]</sup> She criticized the practice of purchasing greeting cards, which she saw as a sign of being too lazy to write a personal letter. She was arrested in 1948 for disturbing the peace while protesting against the commercialization of Mother's Day, and she finally said that she regretted having started it.<sup>[102]</sup>

“Mother's Day continues to be one of the most commercially successful U.S. occasions.

“It is possible that the holiday would have withered over time without the support and continuous promotion of the florist industries and other commercial industries. Other Protestant holidays from the same time, such as Children's Day and Temperance Sunday, do not have the same level of popularity.<sup>[103]</sup> Mother's Day is also prominent in the Sunday comic strips in the newspapers of the United States, expressing emotions ranging from sentimental to wry to caustic.”
